Arroyo de la Miel packs a lot into a small, modern town. It sits right between Benalmadena’s village and the coast, and it’s a real hub for locals and expats. People come here to eat, shop, and catch a show. The train station sits here, connecting Benalmadena to Fuengirola and Malaga, making life easier for commuters. The bus routes cover the area, with some new lines heading out to coastal neighborhoods. It’s no wonder people choose Arroyo as their base.

Benalmadena costa has a numerous and varied selection of hotels that align the beach front, the main road and side streets of this popular tourist destination. The main area of Benalmadena Costa lies between the award winning marina and the area of Torrequebrada which is home to Benalmadena’s only casino.

Within this area there are plenty of restaurants, bars, clubs and entertainment venues that cater for many nationalities. There is also the marina, offering a range of boating and water activities, a Sealife Centre plus a plethora of bars and restaurants.
